Money subscription cards are United States postal cards already addressed, made into complete sets for one year's subscription to The Menace. These cards can be had in any quantity for 25 cents each.

In sending to The Menace we express or postpaid money order, bank draft, cash, personal check or money as far as possible. Write plainly on one side of the paper only and do not send money enclosed for the editorial office in the same letter with a cash order. Money and full address of last subscribers should be correctly stated and plainly written.

A strict observance of the above regulations on the part of our patrons will insure prompt and accurate service and make all our dealings mutually pleasant.

Rome runs her schools like she runs her H. O. G. S. laundries, by getting the labor for nothing. It is a fine thing for Rome, but not so good for laundry workers and teachers who come in competition with slave labor.

A Pointer For Stock Purchasers

A stock purchaser wrote us a few days ago asking if the reorganization of the company and the disposition of a part of the stock in the same would bring any change in the management or policy of the paper, seeming to look with disfavor on any possibility of change.

We wish to answer this man, as well as all others who might have the same ideas in mind, with an emphatic NO!

The idea of disposing of a portion of the stock in the new company was prompted by a desire to forever intrench The Menace in the newspaper field and more securely connect the paper with the men in the field who are doing the work that sustains it, and who have made it the great fighting machine that it is.

This is only a part of a big plan to make The Menace really useful to the American people, and put it in position to start a real fight against the Roman Catholic political machine.

We wish to give every man who so desires, and who is worthy, a chance to identify himself more closely with this great campaign for human liberty and emancipation.

The time is coming when you will be proud to be identified with this movement. You will be proud that you are a stockholder in the United States Publishing Company, for we are getting ready to do things that will count, things that will go down in human history and be read by generations unborn, and we want you to share with us in this credit.

Hundreds of friends asked for stock in this concern when there was none for sale. We were determined in the outset not to be misunderstood, and we were determined to have something to sell before we placed this stock on the market. Most concerns sell stock in order that they may have money to establish the enterprise on which the stock is based. Not so with The Menace. We made this institution a success and established our integrity with the American people before we offered them a chance to share in the proceeds and the work. That was the right way—and the honest way—and when we sell you a share of stock in this company we can look you in the face afterwards. But we only want the true blue—men who are not afraid of us and of whom we are not afraid—that's why the stock is only offered to Menace boosters.

If you belong in our crowd you are invited to get in on this proposition while it is open—it will not always remain open. The shares are ten dollars each, and you are invited to take one, more than one or as many as you like up to the limit mentioned in our literature. We attach herewith a few paragraphs from letters from those who have already purchased and who are proud of it. Read them and you will catch the spirit of progress that has made

BUT OUT THIS COUPON AND USE IT TODAY—COME WITH US FOR A GREATER AND PERMANENT ANTI-CATHOLIC PUBLICATION.

UNITED STATES PUBLISHING CO., Aurora, Mo.

For the $1000.00 enclosed you will mail to my address a certificate for shares of stock in your company, at $10.00 per share, sold stock to be common and non-voting.

The War Lincoln Saw Approaching

Mrs. Murphy's boy kicked over the lantern that started the fire that burned up Chicago.

The pope and his agents, Jesuits and hierarchy, with Austrian and Serbian officials, started the great war in Europe.

Are you sure, Mr. Editor? I AM CERTAIN.

How did Chicago find out who started the blaze that burned the heart of Chicago to a cinder? Of course many agencies, oil and fire trap buildings, and great stores of combustibles, added to the hungry flames after the beginning, and Chicago was doomed by power beyond human control.

Bosnia and Herzegovina had been taken and put under Austrian control, Slavic, and anti-Roman Catholic. They resented the despotic power of Roman Catholic Austria. Serbia could only nurse its wrath and with difficulty restrain her people. And when the pope's concordat was signed with Serbia that bound that anti-papal people to the throne of the vatican, the match thus struck blazed—the bomb burst—and killed Francis Ferdinand and his wife, heir to the Austrian throne.

Now comes the proof that the papal plotters had started something which they could not stop. A clipping from the Weekly Times, Manila, P. I., August 16th, 1914, by its correspondent at Vienna, Austria, June 29, says:

"In MILITARY and CLERICAL circles the feeling aroused by the assassination at Sarajevo, yesterday of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, borders on frenzy. A punitive war upon Serbia is advocated by advanced sections of the MILITARY and CLERICAL PARTIES WHO LOOKED TO THE MURDERED ARCHDUKE TO CARRY OUT THEIR POLITICAL AIMS." "Typical expressions of the anti-Serbian feeling is found in the Reichspost, a journal which the late Archduke specially favored and the leading organ of the MILITARY AND CLERICAL parties."

Space forbids quoting the whole cable dispatch, hot off of the wires from the capital of Austria to this far eastern paper.

Notice, please, the close conjunction in the dispatch of the two words Military and Clerical parties working hand and glove against the people of Serbia. This previous combination of international plotters had secured through the pope a concordat to make Serbia papal and they expected as soon as Emperor Joseph was dead—now already with one foot in the grave—to put Serbia into Roman Catholic chains, by means of the educational system of Rome and the support of two Catholic bishops in Serbia at public expense, besides other papal grafts to be sprung later, according to the tenor of the concordat between the pope and Serbia.

How plain this is in which we read above that "the military and clerical parties looked to the murdered archduke to carry out their political aims."

Do you ask what has all this to do with America? I answer very much, everywhere. Precisely the same plan and intrigue is being pursued by the pope and cardinals here. The attempt is being made to take over the public schools, the joining of the clerical party to politics and the military is a startling and well known fact. The papal system is working like a smoldering fire, but our people seem to be unconcerned, though they see the smoke.

But suddenly, unannounced, the outbreak will appear, the fire start, the war begin between the loyal people of the country and the armed forces of Rome.

When the conflict is on you can never say The Menace did not warn, that it did not cry aloud by day and by night, with pleading and with words full of wrath and indignation at the stupid indifference and moral cowardice of men and women who ought to have rushed to the colors and saved the day. But your opportunity is now. Scratch the name of every papal plotter on your ticket. Scratch deep every traitor to free institutions and liberty! Your ballot can put out the fire now and your peaceful voting stop the approaching war.

God help you to do your duty, at the polls, without fear and without faltering.

Business Men Beware!

An item in the Lincoln, Neb., Daily Star, of Sept. 23, states that the business men of that city are enlisted in a campaign for raising money to pay off an indebtedness of $130,000 against St. Elizabeth's Hospital of that city.

Business men are usually wise enough to look out for their own interests; but it is unlikely that the non-Catholic business men of Lincoln realize what it means to put up money for a papal institution. We do not know just what use may be made of the money invested in that particular institution; but do these men who may be induced to invest in that enterprise realize what they are doing?

Here is a sample of papal financing respectfully submitted to the consideration of non-Catholic merchants who may be wheedled into such a deal. Suppose the non-Catholic business men of Lincoln put up half the money to pay off that debt. By so doing they give the financial branch of the papal system $65,000 to use as capital in promoting its various business enterprises. Don't think that the money will stay tied up in that innocent and charitable-looking hospital. It is only a question of time when the physical plant of that hospital will be bonded as security upon which to get more money.

And what will be done with the money so obtained? We do not know what may be done with it in this particular case; but in other cases it has been used to start enterprises in direct competition with the merchants who originally paid for the hospital in the delusion that they were merely helping a worthy charity.

Let the business men of Lincoln, before they give any of their good money to this enterprise, find how many papist institutions in that city are already pledged for loans and find what the money so obtained is used for. They may be surprised at the result.

It is no secret that the church property and institutions of many dioceses are mortgaged to the limit; and that the money obtained on such loans is being used to finance not only schemes for Catholic colonization but for Catholic factories and business enterprises of divers and sundry kinds.

We have just received an elaborate catalogue of a shoe factory selling direct to consumers, which is operated in the name of charity and in connection with an institution which supplies labor at cost of maintenance or less. It is a Roman Catholic institution at which no non-Catholic shoe worker need apply for a job. It is questionable whether any wages are paid save to superintendents and foremen. It is merely a shoe factory operated like an H. O. G. S. laundry.

These things are not only hard on honest labor that has to fight such conditions in the labor market; but it bumps the capitalist who puts up money for an ecclesiastical competitor to do business upon. You may not be a shoe manufacturer; but your income is derived from some line of trade, and Rome is getting into every field as fast as the money can be piled loose from those who own it.

Priests and papist directors are already in almost every line of business that could be mentioned from agriculture to life insurance and banking. And the more money you place in their reach the wider will be the range of their operations until they come in competition with you.

Do you want them to capture the business of the country with their capital? And do you want them to drive your business to bankruptcy with the slave labor they get so easily from Romanized municipal courts and founding institutions?

Better think, Mr. Business Man, before you invest in that enterprise. Check up Rome's financial operations and see what they mean before contributing.

Timothy Hogan, of O-heigh-O, is the gentleman who has sworn on the shinbones of St. Ann to put The Menace to sleep when—he is elected. Just keep your eye on Timothy, and on The Menace, for we are not half kill.

Another Speaker Mobbed

In defiance of the freedom of speech guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, William Roberts, an anti-Catholic speaker, was mobbed on the evening of July 24, on the public square of Somerset, Ky.

This was his second meeting on the square. He was surrounded by Catholics, some cursing, swearing and making threats. As he finished speaking and began taking up a collection, the police judge, Archie Davis, surrounded the wall surrounding the public fountain and began shouting to Roberts. He maligned the speaker, telling him that he ought to be run out of town and that if he (Davis) was a Catholic or his wife a Catholic, he would break his cane, which he held up threateningly, over Robert's head. Thus encouraged by the police judge, the Nites of Mob and Murder rushed at Roberts and would doubtless have killed him had it not been for the timely intervention of the crowd which, attracted by the mob, gathered quickly. Friends of Roberts succeeded in getting him away from the mob, but not until the Roman ruffians had beaten him and torn his clothes nearly off of him. Roberts appealed to the police for protection, but was refused and told to go to his boarding house by himself. When his friends saw that the police would not do their duty, they themselves escorted the speaker to his lodgings.

The chief of police was in the crowd, but made no attempt to arrest the mob of Romanists, although different offenders were pointed out to him. When friends of the speaker found out that none of the mob would be arrested, they went to the county court and got warrants for the arrest of all the hoodlums who could be identified. The Romanized police judge heard of it, and, manized police judge heard of it, and, when the hoodlum gang found it out, they thought it the better policy to "confess" their part in the riot, so they came forward, acknowledged their guilt and paid their fine. This of course stopped prosecution in the county court where they would not have been dealt with so leniently. The county judge would doubtless have given them fifty days in jail and one hundred dollars fine.

A warrant was secured for the arrest of Police Judge Davis, which resulted in a long jury trial and acquittal in his second. At his last trial a large number crowded the circuit court room. When the trial was over and the people were standing outside in front of the court house, Roberts, the mobbed speaker, came out and announced: "I am going to speak tonight on the square, and all the Catholics this side of hell can't keep me from it!"

A Romanist who heard Roberts make the announcement secured a warrant for his arrest in the city police court, charging him with disorderly conduct. Roberts was tried before the police judge (who had a cane he wished to break over the speaker's head), and was fined $17.50 and put under a peace bond of $100 for a period of thirty days. This was evidently done to get Roberts to leave town, as he was told that the fine would be refunded if he would skidoo. Roberts refused and went to jail, to the surprise of his Romanist accusers. Again he was offered suspension, this time of his jail sentence, if he would only leave town.

Before Roberts went to jail he was told that the lovers of free speech had already engaged another speaker. L. J. King, of Toledo, O., would soon deliver a series of lectures on Romanism. The Roman clique which had been so intolerant of Roberts now began to scout trouble.

The large skating rink, which has the largest seating capacity of any place in Somerset, was engaged for King's lectures. When the intolerant of American freedom learned where the lectures were to be held, they resorted to their usual tactics to get the contract for the hall cancelled, but their bigoted business was met with resentment from Captain Taylor who had charge of the hall, even though he was threatened with removal from his position as captain of Company G of the National Guards. The free speech hater, seeing that the Captain remained firm, tried to bluff the patriots by circulating the report that the hall would be blown up—a strange procedure to be adopted by zealots for the "holy" religion they practice. To this Captain Taylor replied that if it was necessary he would call out the whole company of guards to protect the lecture and the hall.

When King arrived and he revealed to the town of Somerset what Rome was in her true light, the riot-ranting Romanists got scared, and the officials turned Roberts out of jail. He attended the lectures and sat on the platform with King and was applauded every time his name was mentioned by the lecturer.

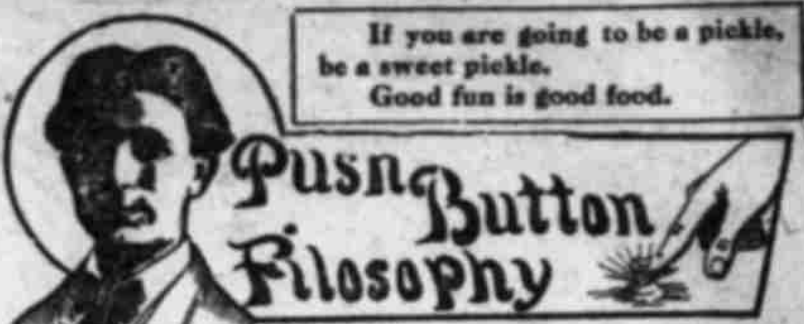

The free-speech hater, seeing they were defeated and thinking mob rule did not take well with Somerset, constitutionalists, decided best not to start another riot, but begged the mayor to make an ordinance requiring every one who wished to speak on the street above a whisper to get a "permit." By this they thought to silence any voice which publicly criticized their religion and their cowardly method of retelling such criticism through mob violence. The ordinance was presented to the council by the mayor as he was bidden, and but for the lovers of free speech among the councilmen, the unconstitutional measure would have passed and Roman intolerance to that degree officially set up in Somerset; but thanks to the patriotic sentiments of noble men who are lovers of American freedom and religious liberty, who speak out in defense of their country's blood-bought institutions against the religious intolerance of Rome, the measure was defeated.

God give us more men who in official capacity are not afraid to exert their manhood and speak their convictions in defense of American freedom.

Five years for a Dollar

When you go to renew your subscription to The Menace, why not renew for five years? You can get on the list five years for only one dollar, thereby saving twenty-five cents in the transaction and avoiding the trouble and annoyance of being entered on the list every year. Not only that, but when you get on the list for five years you will never have to worry about missing an issue of the paper. Send a dollar bill and join the "don't worry" club for five years.

Ten cents extra to have paper wrapped single.

If you are going to be a pickle, be a sweet pickle. Good fun is good food.

Oh, what is so rare as a virtuous priest.

Sing a song of sixpence, A pocket full of rye, A million and a half of papers Baked in a pie. When the pie was opened, 'Twas full of Menace dope— Wasn't that a horrible dish To set before the Pope?

What makes Harper's Weekly? The issue of that paper, Sat., Oct. 30, 1875, had adorned its front page a cartoon by Thomas Nast of General Grant stepping upon the big toe, the one to be kicked, of the pope when that ruler of the universe (?) tried to mix the church and state. "How have the mighty fallen!"

A visitor went thru our plant the other day and said that a friend of his told him that the Menace could be moved in a wheelbarrow. I answered that it could, so could Pike's Peak, but it would take a long time to do it.

I used to believe in spooks when I was a small boy, but since I have been sharing my lot with the Menace my nerve has increased until not even the crossing of my path by a black cat frightens me.

Hogan, of Ohio, seems to think that the motto of that state should be "excellent," which means Oh, higher, but we believe the Protestant voters of that state will vote for Mr. Hogan—to stay at home.

I believe that Marie Louise Points feels much like Jonah did on one occasion, rather down in the mouth, after reading that concoction of irony handed to her last week on the front page regarding the ignorance and illiteracy of the Menace editors. There are some people in this world like George Ade said, "born with brains, some like them tried and some so thru life with out them." Sweet Marie, which class do you stand at the head of?

"I firmly believe that Daddy Noll should be 'nolle prosequed.'"

A friend of mine, Von Elden, handed me the following effusion which I think is timely: There's a gink in old Ohio Wants a piece of public pie-O. We should like to see him get it in the neck.

Yes, the pope's name is Hogan. Lift him, biff him with your brogan. And leave him with the "also rans" a wreck. He's a page and so again us. With his wily schemes would skin us. With the slickest, smoothest touch of cunning skill: So be watchful, never dreaming. For the Pope coniving, scheming. Seeks to rob us of the school house on the hill.

The priests are bad, The Pope's the worst, Read the Menace, For "safety first."

BOSTONIANS WILL LOOK OUT

William F. Murray, the faithful Roman Catholic, Knight of Columbus congressman, who resigned his seat to accept the postmastership at Boston, tendered him by Wilson, Tumulty & Co., has donated the habilitations of office.

Boston subscribers to THE MENACE will please look sharp from here out and report to this office any trouble they may have in the future about getting THE MENACE delivered to their address.
